

I see the good ole' boys are at it again. They can't compete with new technology and they want the taxpayer to protect them from the technology that they brought on themselves with the "crap" that they put on the air. I pay for the privilage of listening to uninterrupted radio and it is simply great. I listen to what I like, when I like and there are no commercials because once again, I PAID FOR THE PRIVILIDGE.

They could compete if they wanted, however they come running to the FCC to protect them from the big, bad competetor. Let them do the same thing and compete in the market like everyone else. Its time for goverment to listen the the people and not the dollar as so many times happens. Need I bring up our "energy policy"?

Let the owners fend for themselves and play the game the way it is supposed to be played, fair and square. Not slanted to them because they have the money! Listen to the voice of the people.
